

HORIZON

Platform for studying with a disability or other special needs

Studying with dyslexia

The TU Delft provides students with dyslexia a number of facilities. Here, you will find more information about the possibilities.

At Horizon you can apply for Extended examination and text-to-speech software TextAid. The Extended examination is 10 minutes per hour. If your request is granted, then the extended examination time will be implemented for all exams during your enrolment at the TU Delft. TextAid reads texts out loud. This allows you to improve your understanding of texts and increase your reading pace.

More information: website Horizon TextAid.

How to apply for extended examination or/and a free license of TextAid time:

1. Go to my.tudelft.nl or the mytudelft-app.
2. Open Osiris Case (see menu Go To below)
3. Click Start Case to start the application and follow the instructions.
4. Attach a digital scan of your official statement bearing the diagnosis 'dyslexia'.

You should submit your application for extended examination 2 weeks before your (first) examinations or tests. An student counsellor of Horizon will manage your request in Osiris Case. You can follow the process of your request through the programme.

Other facilities

Do you think you need other facilities, like large-print exam papers? Please arrange this with the academic counsellor of your faculty.

Career and Counselling Services

As a student you can find answers here to your questions about personal development, or study- and career-development and skills. The central student counsellors, student psychologists and academic counsellors are there to help you. They can offer you short-term personal guidance, and refer you for external support.

Horizon

The student counsellors at Horizon can provide you with information and support about studying with a disability, like financial assistance, housing and individual and group support.

Financial compensation for students who fall behind schedule in their studies

TU Delft may be able to partially compensate you when you are dealing with a study delay. More information can be found on the TU Delft website and with Horizon.

Well-being E-Health tool

This is an online tool where you can start improving your mental wellbeing in a free, simple and anonymous way. More information: www.tudelft.nl/wellbeingtool.

Student Platform: studying with a disability and/or chronic disease

The student platform 'Student Onbeperkt' is a platform for students with a disability and/or chronic disease. The platform will meet a couple times a year in order to discuss current issues regarding studying with a disability. For more information about or participate in the student platform, see website Horizon or send an mail to studentonbeperkt@tudelft.nl.
