

Better TUgether, This is how we care

Social safety update - September

Last month

- Work visit to the Dutch Public Broadcasting System (NPO).
- Social safety focus during the OWee.

Upcoming month

- TU Delft has appointed three new internal confidential advisers for social and organisational integrity, effective from 1 September.
- Share & Care workshop 3 September.
- First meeting of the sounding board group, 19 September.
- TU Delft reports quarterly to the Education Inspectorate starting from October onwards.

Under the microscope

The social safety of students was the focus of attention during the OWee. This included initiatives such as:

- The Well-Being Roadmap helps get (new) students on the right track when they are struggling with a problem.
- For the third year in a row, the “Ben je oké?” campaign (Rutgers) was deployed in cooperation with all associations. Anyone who feels uncomfortable or has experienced or seen something unpleasant can report it to a person wearing the so-called “Ben je oké?” captain’s armband.

Dilemma of the month

What is social safety anyway? Who is responsible for it? What does and does not constitute transgressive behaviour? And what role do you play?

From next month, this update will include a dilemma to get you thinking. These dilemmas derive from TU Delft’s own context.

Let us know!

Do you have or have you had to deal with social insecurity due to transgressive behaviour such as aggression, discrimination, sexism, (sexual) harassment or bullying?

We are working hard on a new, central contact point where everyone can go with questions, reports, or simply for a listening ear. This will be available from October onwards.
