

Better TUgether.

This is how we care

Social safety update – December

Last month

- License-to-lead: leadership training
- Development of a feedback culture
- A consistent R&D process
- Mindlab: the first reactions

Under the microscope

New Code of Conduct at TU Delft

Starting in January, everyone is cordially invited to help write a new code of conduct for TU Delft. We think it is important that the entire TU Delft community feels involved and heard. There will be several facilitated meetings offering space to reflect together on important questions, such as: ‘What does social (un)safety mean within our university?’ ‘What do we mean by transgressive behaviour?’ and ‘When is the code of conduct actually violated?’ The aim is to present a new code of conduct before the summer.

Upcoming month

Mindlab: A new series of performances from January 2025

“Go because it helps you put words to situations you observe or experience yourself.”
- Paulien Herder (Dean of the Faculty of Engineering)

Let us know!

Call: share your input and contribute to the campaign around social safety

In January, a campaign will launch to raise awareness about social safety. This initiative focuses on everyday dilemmas related to socially unsafe or undesirable behavior in the workplace. Topics include discrimination, bullying, inclusivity, and addressing difficult conversations.

Would you like to contribute dilemmas for this campaign? Share your ideas via ideas@tudelft.nl. Submissions will remain anonymous and might be featured in campaign materials, such as flyers or bus shelter ads.

